Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dickerson Celebrate Golden Anniversary

A host of friends and relatives numbering over 175, attended the golden wedding anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. W. Edward Dickerson at their home at Spout Spring on Sunday afternoon, between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock.

The lower floor of the home was illuminated by the burning of golden colored candles, providing a soft glowing light. A profusion of yellow roses, gold colored pon pons, and yellow snapdragons, artistically arranged in gilded slipper containers, added beauty and color to the occasion and carried out the celebration motif. Intermingled in the flower arrangements were miniature golden wedding bells and wedding rings.

A three-tiered wedding cake was served the guests, along with punch from a huge gold bowl. Those assisting in serving were Mrs. H. S. Jones, Mrs. George R. Collins, Mrs. Clem R. Morton, Mrs. Howlette B. Martin and Mrs. Richard K. Lawson, the last two named being daughters of the celebrants.

One uniqueness of the occasion was the presence of nine of the couple's wedding attendants. They were, Miss Lena Morris, who served as her sister's maid of honor; Miss Eltha Morris, also a sister of the bride; Mrs. Mary Goodman Coleman, Mrs. Mamie Dickerson Evans, William C. Chilton, F. Orman Jones, E. R. Cheatham and Jesse E. Dickerson.

Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henry Morris on November 30, 1904. The officiating minister was the late Rev. G. A. Chocklette.

Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson have operated a general merchandise store at Spout Spring for the past 37 years.

Celebrating with Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson were their 11 children and their families, namely, Mr. and Mrs. Howlette B. Martin and two sons, Howlette Jr. and Billy, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dickerson and son, Fred Jr., of Spout Spring Mr. and Mrs. Richard K. Lawson. Mr. and Mrs. Homer C. Babcock and two sons, Home, Jr. and Bobby, and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Dickerson and son, Earl, of Lynchburg Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Steele and daughters, Mrs. Scott Parsons Jr. and Miss Sarah Jane Steele and Mr. Parsons, Miss Erna Dickerson, and Claude Dickerson, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Tureman and daughters, Nancy Jane and Suzanne, all of Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Frazier, and sons, Hank and Edward, of Altavista; and, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dickerson Jr. and children, Martha, Anne and William, of Stuart.

The Dickersons were the recipients of many lovely gifts on this happy occasion.

(Reprinted from the Times-Virginian of Dec. 7, 1904, is the following account of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Dickerson:)

The home of Mr. J. H. Morris was the scene of a lovely marriage November 30th, when Nannie, the fait daughter became the bride of Mr. Eddie Dickerson. Owing to the recent death of the mother of the bride, a quiet affair was desired. Only a few friends and relatives were present. The attendants were as follows: maid of honor, Miss Lena Morris; best man, Mr. Jessie Dickerson. Miss Mary Goodman and Mr. Elridge Cheatham; Miss Elsie Cheatham and Mr. Elliott Cheatham; Miss Mamie Dickerson and Mr. Ormand Jones; Miss Minnie Cheatham and Mr. William Chilton Miss Etta Morris and Mr. Frank Furbush; Miss Mittie Dickerson and Mr. Norman Cheatham. The ladies were dressed in black skirts and white waists. The bridal party entered the room while Mendelssohn's Wedding March was being rendered by Miss Ava, the sister of the bride. The bride entered on the arm of the maid of honor, both arrayed in lovely white costumes and bridal veils, with chrysanthemums. Rev. G. A. Chocklete joined the young hearts in wedlock. After a shower of congratulations, the party entered the dining room, where an elaborate supper was prepared. This young couple is well known and popular in our community, which evidence is characterized in the many presents which they received.

WHO'S RED-FACED?

Some hunter may be in for an unnerving experience this season. The purpose of this story is to prepare him.

There are red-faced bear roaming the mountains in Virginia. It didn't come naturally. They had their faces painted with red paint, and tags put in their ears, as part of a study on the life and times of bears. The study is being conducted by the VPI Wildlife Research Unit, the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries, and the U. S. Forest Service, as part of a long-time investigation of the black bear in Virginia.

Bear hunting, officials explain, is rapidly increasing in popularity in Virginia, and the investigation (of which the face-painting and ear-tagging is only a part) is designed to supply information needed in game management.

The researchers, among other things, want to know how far bear travel, and this cannot be definitely shown until the animals are tagged and traced. So, any hunter who sees or bags one of the marked bears is asked to report the fact to the VPI Wildlife Research Unit at Blacksburg.

Several additional bear will be marked next spring. The technique of trapping? The researchers use a huge box trap which resembles a mammoth rabbit trap. The bear are baited with honey and once inside, are anesthetized with ether injected from spray guns into the tightly closed trap. While they sleep they are tagged and painted.

SHORT WINTER FEED SUPPLY PROBLEM

Short winter food supplies and an increasing livestock population again this year add up to a problem for Virginia farmers.

Animal husbandmen are pointing out that breeding stock of sheep and hogs represent years of work and selection and should be hastily disposed of only as a temporary feed shortage.

For farms short of hay, the specialists have suggestions to help conserve and stretch existing supplies.

Adjust livestock numbers to them more in line with supplies . . . 4 lambs or more per year and 12 baby pigs from each pig fed to market weight. Pounds of grain and pounds of hay to winter a ewe; a pound of hay to winter a beef animal.

Balance the ration with protein supplements. This is the smaller amount go farther, also improve digestion.

Give livestock free access to grazing possible. Green pasture is ideal but unless there is plenty of it, use it for cattle, hogs, pigs, or for your ewes and lambs are born. The ewes can use rougher feed, but the suckle if you have it.

Be on the lookout for winter shortage. Weak or stillborn pigs, or calves; pregnant ewes; and white muscle disease; all nutritional troubles. Poor quality feed and too little of it are false economy, and is dangerous to pregnant sows, cows and ewes.

D. from Michigan State College, has been named associate professor of biochemistry He has held positions with the Canadian Federal Government, the New Jersey Experiment Station, the Michigan State Health Department, and the U. S. Department of Agricultural Bureau of Dairy Industry, with headquarters at Michigan State College.

Announced by the VPI Extension Service is the resignation of Miss Lucille Graves, associate state 4-H agent since May, 1950, to be married to J. L. Calhoun, associate agricultural engineer at VPI.

STRETCH WINTER FEED SUPPLIES

Use plenty of loose salt. Mineral mixtures may help.

Worm each calf at weaning time with a dose of phenothiazine. Give a 400-pound calf 2 ounces of phenothiazine powder, or a 500-pound calf 2½ ounces. Treat all sheep with an individual dose of phenothiazine in late November, and again about the time good pastures come. Treat pregnant ewes at least 30 days before they are to lamb. Pigs should be wormed with sodium flouride when they are 10 weeks old, and again at four months.

Don't let lice feed on your livestock. Spray or dip. Do this twice for cattle lice — once in early winter and again in very early spring. On a week warm bright days. Ticky sheep in the dead of winter should be dusted with rotenone, rather than sprayed or dipped. Mange pigs must be dipped in lindane or BHC solution.

Help spring arrive early by fertilizing pasture. An application of complete fertilizer, high in nitrogen, will let you turn livestock out two weeks earlier next spring.

MANAGE WINTER PASTURES WISELY

How you let animals graze winter pastures will have a lot to do with how valuable the pastures will be in furnishing feed.

John F. Shoulders, associate agronomist at VPI, says there are a few rules to follow to insure higher yields.

Graze rotationally. Divide the pasture so a part of it can be grazed while the rest recovers.

Keep heavy animals off the pasture when it is too wet for the sod to hold them.

Save a part of the field to graze when the weather is too cool for the mixture to grow, or to give you some early spring grazing. If the small grain begins to joint this fall, graze it to reduce winter-killing.

Topdress your winter pasture with from 30 to 40 pounds of nitrogen per acre in January or February to increase spring growth. If a good growth of legumes is present, there should be enough nitrogen.
